The "2005 Sharing Book of the Year," Broken Chains, written by well-known evangelist Doug Batchelor, is now available from Pacific Press®

Nampa, Idaho (August 30, 2004) — The 2005 Sharing Book of the Year, Broken Chains, written by well-known evangelist Doug Batchelor, is now available from Pacific Press®. Broken Chains, published particularly for non-Adventist readers, is perfect for sharing with friends, family, co-workers and others who need encouragement. Each copy includes an offer for free Bible study guides.

Broken Chains explores the power of God to liberate and transform lives bound by sin through the extraordinary biblical account of Jesus and the demoniac of Decapolis. Batchelor, speaker and director of international media ministry Amazing Facts, says "The story of the demoniac reminds me of my own conversion. It is a wonderful platform for sharing hope with those who are discouraged or feel their condition is hopeless."

In the book, Batchelor provides a vivid window into the cosmic conflict between the forces of good and evil. He also unfolds the wonderful power of God to liberate and transform men and women who are bound in the murkiest depths of sin and provide peace to their souls. "Broken Chains is beautifully written. Every non-Adventist and Adventist alike will benefit from reading it," says Dale Galusha, vice president of ministries and sales at Pacific Press®.

Pacific Press® has sent a complimentary copy of Broken Chains to each church in North America. Copies are available at your local Adventist Book Center®. To purchase a copy, call (800) 765-6955 or go to www.AdventistBookCenter.com. Quantity pricing is available. Individual copies are $1.99.
