Dedication of New Printing Press

Nampa, Idaho (July 27, 2015) — Pacific Press® administration and staff met this week with Dale Galusha, president, for a special prayer of dedication over a newly installed printing press.

With recent changes in the publishing work and the increase in workload newer, more efficient, equipment was required to meet the pressing demand. Equipment was found in Arizona for sale by a family-owned and operated plant. "It was easy to see God's hand in leading us to this specific machine," said Larry Johnson, vice president for production. "His timing was perfect. The equipment became available precisely when we needed it."

It took two weeks to disassemble the machinery and nine trucks to transport it from Phoenix to Nampa.

Moving Forward

Johnson commended everyone involved in helping with the installation. "We are in the midst of advanced training now, and we especially thank the pressmen who have put in many extra hours and have had to learn a whole new concept of printing with this new press."

The MAN Roland Rotoman is nine years old, and has all the necessary features needed in a busy publishing house, including a 50,000/hr running speed, fast folder changeover, and low start-up waste.

Galusha concluded by saying, "We look forward to serving the church in North America, and to faithfully playing our part in finishing the work."
