Updates . . .

All New PacificPress.com

On March 12, Pacific Press released a major update to PacificPress.com. The website, available in both English and Spanish, better serves our constituents. A mobile-friendly design allows the website to be more usable in more places. The ability to delegate sections of the site to various departments will allow content owners (such as Marketing, HR, Product Development) to directly edit the website. This means new content will be easier to share, while reducing the workload on the IT department.

If you have a bookmark in your browser for the Press In Print, please update it to the new location: www.pacificpress.com/press_in_print. Just so you know, there are no spaces in the link—what might look like spaces are actually under_scores.

Inspector PIP Looks Back

2009 may seem like it was a long time ago—okay, it was ten years ago, so it WAS a long time ago! Allow us to refresh your memory a little...

March of 2009, we welcomed

Mel McGuire (Production) to Pacific Press. Happy 10th anniversary, Mel!

We also reported that Steve Ertel (formerly of the IT staff) had joined the Marketing team as the new Director of Electronic Marketing. Does it make you wonder if he was dreaming about the new website way back then?

In the same timeframe, Andrew and Gina Duncan (Prepress and Customer Service) were announcing that their first child, Zachary Roberto Duncan, had arrived! He is now about to celebrate his 10th birthday. Happy Birthday, Zach!

Zach Duncan then...

And now!
