MIRACLES AT THE PRESS

FROM YOUR HR
DEPARTMENT

DATELINE

Miracles? You Decide...

by Jeff Ramsey

A truckload of an inventory item that we regularly use came into the press. It was the wrong size and not what was ordered. A replacement would not be available for several months, but we could substitute another item on hand and squeeze by until the replacement stock was available.

The mill told us they would take the truckload of stock back, since it was a size we wouldn't normally inventory. While the return was being discussed, a project came in that was very hot and had to be quickly produced. The load of "mistake" paper matched the exact weight and size of paper that was needed for this project. If we did not have the correct paper, it would have taken months to get the stock from the mill.

In another instance, some regular projects needed an inventory item that had been delayed by several months. When talking to the paper company, they mentioned that they had stock on the floor that had been delivered a couple of months previously to them that they were holding just for us. They had 77,000 sheets. We needed approximately 70,000 sheets.

In the last year and a half, I have seen several other instances like the above, but after time have forgotten the circumstances. Now I am trying to document while still fresh in my mind.

I would like to suggest that we compile the stories from all departments. It would be encouraging and a good reminder that miracles can still happen. Even though we may get tied up in the day-to-day routine of working here at the Press, it is good to remember that we are working for the Lord and He has an interest in what we do.

Some may feel that all things that happen are coincidences, but if we were to see the full list of "unusual occurrences" through the facility, I feel we would realize that God is guiding.

Share with us the miracles, and God's leading, that you have seen in your area at Pacific Press!
